

Adaptive Strategic Execution Program Certification Requirements

Our Adaptive Strategic Execution Program (ASEP), established in partnership between Strategy Execution and Duke Corporate Education, is our solution to the evolving challenges of getting work done. It focuses on developing leaders of project-based work as they navigate unanticipated market shifts and unpredictable industry disruptions. The Adaptive Strategic Execution Program curriculum consists of eight courses, each of which is purposefully designed to extend the mindset, tool set, and skill set of the project-based work leader to thrive in increasingly complex contexts.

Strategy Execution's proven business techniques combined with Duke Corporate Education's cutting-edge university research infuse the program with a one-of-a-kind project-focused perspective designed to transform the way work gets done.

Adaptive Strategic Execution Program Certification Requirements

Today, leaders of project-based work must have the right skill sets, an adaptive approach, and a responsive mindset to help them and their organizations navigate an increasingly complex and collaborative environment.

The Adaptive Strategic Execution Program (ASEP), built in partnership between Duke Corporate Education and Strategy Execution, focuses explicitly on building leaders who can master the three domains that influence and define how work gets done: strategy, work, and people.

Each of the eight courses in the program aligns to two or more of these domains, and each course is designed to teach the competencies necessary to navigate these domains in a real-world setting. To earn a program certificate of completion from Duke University's Fuqua School of Business, two required courses and four electives must be successfully completed.
